

A front page story in a local daily paper yesterday chronicled an air meet which was attended by an enthusiastic throng of spectators and participants. In the next column appeared the account of the death of one of America's foremost pilots, who crashed to his death at 300 miles an hour before 20,000 witnesses at a middle-western airport. While the publication of the latter story might possibly retard the progress of aviation to some extent the damage is by no means irreparable. People are beginning to realize that the majority of airplane accidents are attributable to foolhardiness rather than to faulty design of aircraft and incompetence of licensed pilots. The fact that air meets are so well attended despite occasional fatalities seems to prove the argument.

The better pilots today are not those with ambitions to become spectacular speed-merchants; rather their aim is to attain a ripe old age. And that's the only kind of a pilot we'd care to ride with.

The continued low price of gasoline adds much to the pleasure and frequency of motoring if one can judge by the crowded condition of the highways over the week-ends. Did we say crowded? Well, "jammed" is the correct word. Some of the main arterials are so narrow as to become hazardous under ordinary circumstances, and on Sundays—particularly after dark—they are not to be undertaken lightly. We have in mind particularly both roads to Oakland. Whichever way you choose to go you will encounter stretches unpleasantly narrow. Other stretches contain three and four lanes. It is very disconcerting to barge into one of these "bottlenecks" after a dozen or more miles of clear sailing.

The Bayshore highway out of San Francisco presents a nice example of sensible highway construction. There is one improvement we'd like to suggest, however: why not a stout wire-mesh fence right in the middle of it? There are four lanes—sufficiently adequate for the present, anyway—two for southbound and two for northbound traffic. Fine; but on Sunday nights when the city folks are hurrying home, northbound traffic frequently usurps the outside southbound lane, thereby confining southbound traffic to a single lane, making passing almost impossible; extremely dangerous at best. Why not a good fence . . .

Goat Island is no more. In its place reigns "Yerba Buena," which is without doubt a much more picturesque name. Legislators made the change official at the current session.

Session—a great word. College people frequently hold what they call "bull sessions" at which they discuss everything under the sun, and usually arrive nowhere. They are patterned, we believe, after "legislative sessions," the only difference being that the

The substitution of lethal gas for the noose in California penal institutions was one of the weighty problems entertained at the current gathering of solons. If what we are pleased to call our mind serves us correctly, the thing became a law. "Oh Death, where is thy sting?" Death: "Why, it was rudely wrested from me by the illustrious California legislature, you poor sap." And so it goes—

STREET CAR, AUTO COLLIDE; STREET CAR IS DISABLED

Ted Cutting, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Cutting, had the unfortunate experience of being struck by a streetcar at the crossing of Campbell and Railroad avenues here last Thursday afternoon.

Cutting had stooped to let the streetcar make the turn, and too late noticed that he had stopped too close to the track, and the side of the car struck the right side of the automobile, crushing the fender, tearing a headlight loose and damaging a tire. The air brake on the streetcar had to be repaired before it could go on to San Jose.

Neither Cutting nor his companion were injured.

BURGLARS LOOT GAS STATION OF CANDY SUPPLY

The Fry Service station was the scene Saturday night of a robbery in which the loot was confined to an assortment of candy. A car bearing a Whittier registration card was abandoned at the station, presumably by the marauders, according to Officer Harry Evans, who reported the arrair to the sheriff's office.

President Hoover Orders Drastic Economies in Departments—Old Military Posts May Be Abandoned—Briand Defeated.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Sec. Hurley

PRESIDENT Hoover has notified the members of the cabinet that they must introduce economies in their departments wherever possible. The civilian personnel is to be reduced and the overhead expenses cut drastically. The message went out after the President had conferred with Secretary of War Hurley and Secretary of the Navy Adams, and it is evident he expects many of the economies to be made effective in those departments.

Surveys have been recently made indicating how savings could be made by the sale of old Indian posts, navy shore stations, coast artillery fortifications, and yards and other shore properties of the navy that are no longer needed for purposes of national defense. Secretary Hurley said the other day that the administration desired to remove army posts from the "pork barrel" classification, and it seems that among those considered superfluous are Fort Lincoln, North Dakota; Fort Meade, South Dakota; Fort Missoula, Montana; Fort Eustis, Virginia, and various posts along the Mexican border. Some air flying fields also may be abandoned. How far the economies of the military establishments can be cut is problematical. The last annual supply bill for the War department carried about $445,000,000, of which approximately $111,000,000 was to be devoted to nonmilitary activities. The latter figure included $80,000,000 for rivers and harbors and $25,000,000 for Mississippi flood control.

As for the navy, it is known that civilian labor cost that department $79,000,000 last year. Some official investigators have estimated the Navy department personnel at Washington could be cut as much as 40 per cent without impairing efficiency.

Congressmen in whose states are located the obsolete army posts and surplus shore stations probably will fight against their abandonment, but this sort of fight is not likely to be carried throughout all the executive departments their political life may be unavailing.

FRED C. CROXTON, vice chairman of the President's emergency committee for unemployment, stated that during the week ending May 9 contracts were awarded for public and semi-public work amounting to $27,904,799. This brought the total since December 1, 1930, to nearly a billion and a half.

FOREIGN MINister Aristide Briand was persuaded by his friends to be a candidate for the presidency of the French republic and then some of those friends let him down. The result was that he failed of election on the first ballot and, astounded and broken hearted, he withdrew his name from the presidential contest. Paul Doumer, venerable president of the senate, was elected. This action by the French parliament was of importance not only to France but to Europe and all the world. It means that for the present at least Briand's policy of peace and conciliation is discarded and the nationalists are in the saddle. It is possible Briand will continue to represent his government in the debates of the League of Nations at Geneva, but if he does he will be subject to daily orders from Paris. More likely it is that he will soon retire to Cocheret, his home. He has been in poor health for many months and it is feared this defeat will break him down badly. Andre Tardieu and Edouard Herriot, leaders of the left, are held mainly responsible for the rejection of Briand.

ANTI-CLERICALS of Spain, egged on by Communists and very possibly by Monarchist plotters, staged violent riots in Madrid and other cities for several days, and the government was forced to proclaim martial law. The mobs directed their attacks against Catholic churches and other religious edifices and burned many of them. Monks and nuns were beaten and driven through the streets, and in some cases the troops that were called out refused to move against the rioters, telling their officers they would not fire on the people. Angel Galarza, the republic's prosecutor, declared the riots were the result of a carefully laid Monarchist plot and that there would be a monster trial of captured royalists in which former King Alfonso will be judged, in his absence, for complicity. The Vatican state department instructed Papal Nuncio Tedeschini at Madrid to demand from the government an explicit apology for the attacks on churches, monasteries and convents. The Vatican protest, while not blaming these attacks on the Republican government, asserted that violence against religious orders does not represent a general political tendency, but is the result of the anti-religious odium of a small minority of Spain.

PRAJADHIPOK, king of Siam, underwent a successful operation for the removal of a cataract from his left eye, and is recovering nicely at Ophir hall, the White-law Reid mansion in Westchester county, New York. He was an excellent patient and, being under only local anesthesia, he knew what was going on and co-operated in every way with Drs. J. M. Wheeler and T. N. Johnson, who performed the operation.

Sen. Fletcher

FIFTY railway executives have united in asking an increase of freight rates that would bring $450,000,000 more revenue to their roads, but it will not be granted without a fight. Duncan U. Fletcher, senator from Florida and ranking Democrat on the senate commerce committee, voiced the opposition to the plan. He called for lower rates rather than higher carrying charges and said one reason why trucks were moving so much freight today was because of "high rail rates."

"I cannot see how the railroads can expect to increase their revenues by increasing rates," he said. "Some ten years ago an increase of 40 per cent was allowed the railroads and this brought the rates up to the highest point ever reached. They have been revised downward by the interstate commerce commission in 5,000 out of 6,000 cases brought."

"Today the railroads complain of a loss of business and lay a good deal of that to competition by trucks and to some extent airplanes. Undoubtedly they would increase their revenues by raising the rates provided they could carry the same amount of tonnage, but it is perfectly obvious that one reason why trucks are moving so much freight is because of the high rail rates. Consequently if these rates were increased there would be an inevitable decrease in tonnage."

ONE of the world's greatest scientists, Prof. Albert A. Michelson, formerly of the University of Chicago, passed away in Pasadena, Calif., after a long illness and was laid at rest in Altadena. He was the recipient of all the honors the world of science could bestow, not the least of which was the Nobel prize for his achievement in measuring the speed of light, and it has been said that his discoveries and inventions added billions to the wealth of the world; but withal he was exceedingly modest and unassuming and always declared he carried on his great works in physics because they amused and interested him. Doctor Michelson was a native of Poland but was brought to the United States when a babe and was educated in San Francisco and the naval academy at Annapolis. Two years after his graduation he went back to the academy as an instructor, and it was then he began the experiment and investigations that continued throughout his long life.

Another eminent man, Eugene Ysaye, master of the violin, died in Brussels, Belgium, at the age of seventy-two. He is survived by his American wife, the daughter of Dr. Herman Wincin of Brooklyn, N. Y., whom he married in 1927.

Walter A. Strong, publisher of the Chicago Daily News and one of the most forceful figures in American journalism, died suddenly of heart disease. He was only forty-seven years old. He became publisher and principal owner of the News in 1925, after the death of Victor Lawson.

SECRETARY OF

State Henry L. Stimson, in an address on United States foreign relations and especially American policy toward Latin America, served notice that our army and navy will not be used to collect debts from foreign nations. At the same time, he made it clear, the present administration would give to Americans who have investments abroad all the protection, counsel and assistance to which they are entitled under international law.

Defending the Hoover policies in Nicaragua, which have been attacked, Mr. Stimson declared the administration was not departing from American traditions, adding that "the United States would continue to be zealous in its concern for the lives of its nationals wherever they may be found." He characterized the current policy toward Latin America as one of removing sore spots which have injured good will and American trade.

Mr. Stimson expressed confidence that the Anglo-French negotiations would eventually be successfully concluded, expressing the opinion that a great stimulus had been given the prospects for success of the league conference on general disarmament to be held next February.

Cultivation of good will between nations was described by him as "the great business of diplomacy." "Honest people in one nation find it notoriously difficult to understand the viewpoint of honest people in another," he said. "State department and their ministers exist for the purpose of translating the viewpoints of one nation into the terms understood by another. Some of our most important work and efforts at the present time lie in this direction."

Prince of Wales

SPEAKING before the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, the prince of Wales harshly admonished British business men for their failures in getting and holding foreign trade. The only way which Great Britain can gain a larger share of the South American market, he declared, was by imitating North American business and advertising methods. The prince is delivering a series of speeches dealing with conditions he found prevalent in South America during his recent tour.

Not only did Wales score British business methods, but he also dipped into politics in a way that caused a sensation. His advocacy of "manufacturing within tariff walls" cuts squarely across the hottest political issue of the moment in Britain—tariff versus free trade—and was an unexpected blow to the free trade labor government.

PRESIDENT HOOVER has appointed George Hastings of New York as a member of the White House secretarial staff to succeed French Strother. Mr. Hastings is given the title of executive clerk and will handle the President's outside social welfare interests, including his contacts with the conference on child health and protection. He will take up his duties about June 1 after 15 years of social welfare work in New York.

THERE is consternation in gangland. And pleased surprise among the decent citizens of Chicago. Al Capone, the redoubtable gangster chieftain, hitherto locked upon as almost unquarable, has been defied and is seemingly doomed to fail in one of his latest efforts to add to his monetary stores. It is the dyeing and cleaning industry of Chicago, which has been a fruitful field for racketeers, that has done the defying, and in its bold stand it is backed up by the law-enforcing agencies of the city and state.

"Scarface" thought the time was ripe for him to take charge of the industry, and through agents he informed the Cleaners and Dyers Institute that he would do so for 75 per cent of its annual receipts in membership dues, which would be about $100,000. For this he promised to keep prices up, to police the industry and to bring into line its recalcitrant members. A committee from the institute met Capone in his hotel headquarters in Chicago and he repeated his offer, reducing his demands to 50 per cent but declaring if his offer were not accepted he would take over the industry anyhow. The institute, however, happens to have as its chairman Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, honest and nervy, who had practically freed the industry from the racketeers. He told Capone no gangster associations would be tolerated, and State's Attorney Swanson promised to support him to the limit in this stand.

Capone's efforts to take over the cleaning and dyeing industry were regarded by Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, in charge of racketeer prosecutions, as an indication of the reverses suffered by the gang in recent months.

"There is no question that Capone's mob has been hard hit, and that he needs money," said Prosecutor Mueller. "His gambling racket has felt the force of raids by the police and the state's attorney's office, in connection with the special grand jury, and some of his biggest howleries have been raided by the federal agents. The prosecution of the last few months by the federal government, and the high bonds required, have no doubt caused Capone to look around for new ways of raising money."

FOLLOWING the example set by Princeton last year, Yale university announces a change in the plan of study in Yale college which in effect eliminates the requirement of Latin and Greek for any undergraduate degree. Entrants are permitted to substitute for those languages an equivalent amount of French, German, Italian or Spanish. Beginning with the class of 1932, the degree of bachelor of philosophy will be abolished and all students in Yale college, which is the academic department of the university, will be candidates for the degree of bachelor of arts. The change was decided on by President James R. Angell and the fellows of the university in accordance with a recommendation made by Dean Clarence Mendell and the general faculty of the college. NATIONAL AFFAIRS

By Frank L. Litschert

President Hoover did well, in addressing the World Chamber of Commerce to call attention to the great burden of military armaments in Europe. After mentioning the efforts which have been made to reduce naval armament, in which as we all know Uncle Sam took the lead and made the major sacrifices, voluntarily giving up world naval supremacy which was within his grasp, the President rightly paid some attention to the question of military establishments. As the President well said: "The United States has a less direct interest in land armament reduction than any of the large nations because our forces have already been demobilized and reduced more than all others."

This is a fact which we are too apt to overlook and which the professional pacifists always overlook in their efforts to render Uncle Sam defensively helpless, without regard to whether the rest of the world disarms or not. As a matter of fact although highly efficient and well trained, the United States army is little more, in numbers, than a national police force. It compares in size only to the armies of the third-rate powers in Europe. Using figures of the Foreign Policy association, a society not prejudiced against internationalism, we find that seven powers of Europe and Asia have conscript armies larger than the non-conscript army of the United States, and one power, Great Britain, has a non-conscript army considerably larger than ours. The figures are: France, 607,533; Russia, 562,000; Italy, 354,570; Poland, 253,821; Japan, 198,800; Roumania, 185,726; Switzerland, 156,070; Great Britain, non-conscript, 344,450 first line troops. Czechoslovakia, Spain and Yugoslavia have conscript armies of approximately the same size as the non-conscript army of the United States.

It will be seen, therefore, that in shouting for peace and disarmament in the United States, Frederick Libbey and his professional "defense busters" are barking up the wrong tree. It is not Uncle Sam who is responsible for the military burdens of the world. His army will not compare in size with that of any of the other first class powers of the world, excepting only Germany, which was disarmed by the Versailles treaty with the understanding that the other nations would follow suit.

If our professional pacifists are entirely sincere, and wish to do something to further disarmament, why do they not move their propaganda batteries and their peace doves to Europe, where their valued services are really needed? The reason they do not is obvious. They well know that nothing can be done in Europe, because Europe is not ready to disarm. So they confine their assaults to the United States in the hope of earning their money by rendering Uncle Sam as defenseless as possible, thru an appeal to the sentiment of the American people.

Europe will not disarm, in spite of the good advice which President Hoover has given her. She will not disarm for several reasons, among them mutual national jealousies, fears and ambitions. But the biggest reason of all can be found in the ever-looming shadow of Soviet Russia. The communists have declared war on the capitalistic world. And altho the Foreign Policy association gives the number of Russian first line conscripted troops as 562,000, everyone who is in touch with the situation knows that Russia's potential military strength is far greater than this. In fact the soviet leaders are organizing the entire nation, man, woman and child on a military basis, and boast that within a few years they can call out an army of ten million trained men. With this menace hovering near, it is small wonder that central and western Europe are not inclined to disarm. Yet peculiarly enough, a great many of our professional pacifists seem strangely sympathetic with Soviet Russia. If they want to start a real demilitarizing movement let them begin by convincing Soviet Russia that now is the time for all good nations to disarm.

KIWANIS NOTES

By Heck

Campbell Kiwanians enjoyed a very interesting detailed report of the International convention at Miami at today's luncheon. Henry Buell, president of the San Jose club acting as delegate, is now spreading inspiration among clubs not represented at International, and Henry surely has a way of transmitting his enthusiasm.

He told of the royal entertainment given them by many of the clubs enroute to the convention. The business meetings and conferences in session daily were veritable beehives crowded to the doors.

Altho the Calif.-Nevada district carried away seven of the 13 International trophies, not one of them was won on an efficiency basis, which shows that other states and divisions are doing many of the worthwhile things that the Calif.-Nevadans might well be doing.

Our own Bert Buell made a suggestion that may go far toward safeguarding our boys and girls on the school buses. He suggested that this club sponsor a movement for a monitor on every school bus, whose duty it shall be to act as a traffic officer for his bus at all railway crossings, insuring against such tragedies as have recently occurred. Such a movement is sure to receive the support of all thinking people.

Warren Hyde reported that this has been the practice on one of the Cupertino buses for some time.

Rev. C. G. Sylvester will speak on "Certain Drifts in Western Civilization" next Tuesday and Bert Buell will preside.

C. S. LECTURE AT LOS GATOS CHURCH THIS EVENING

A free lecture on Christian Science, by Charles V. Winn, C. S., of Pasadena, Calif., member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother church, First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., was given at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, hopefulness, for in the midst of all the turmoil and confusion Christian Science has come to the world to satisfy the deepest human need and to reveal an understanding of divine reality that will plant our feet firmly on the rock of eternal and unchanging truth. Nothing less can ever suffice, for truth alone is real, and reality is always true.

"Since that alone possesses reality which reflects God, then a true knowledge of God is essential in order to understand that which is real. At this point it may be stated that Christian Science is founded entirely on the scriptures. Mrs. Eddy declared, as shown in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 169), that within Bible pages she had found all the divine Science she preached. And so in defining Deity she adheres strictly to scriptural definitions. Of Him she says, "God is what the scriptures declare Him to be—Life, Truth, Love" (Science and Health, p. 330). Here is a definition of Deity which may well engage our most earnest thought and which will so enlighten us as to the eternal verities of being that untold blessings will follow.

"God in the very nature of His being must be infinite. That God could be limited in any way is unthinkable. God being infinite and Life, there must be one infinite Life. All forms of life must proceed from and be the expression of this one infinite Life. All creation must have its being in and be sustained by this one creative Life. This infinite Life must be 'our Father-Mother God, All-harmonious,' and must be perfect and eternal. It must be everywhere manifesting its life-giving qualities and upholding in perfect harmony all its ideas, or creation. If there were an element of friction or discord in Life, then Life would eventually be self-destructed. Everything that truly exists must express this one infinite Life, which always manifests itself in vitality, strength, health, vigor and perfect action."

in Los Gatos this evening, May 19.

Mr. Winn said, in part: "A subject that is engaging the most earnest thought and attention of men today is that of reality. So rapid have been the changes in the affairs of mortals that former theories about reality have been overturned with startling suddenness. In the light of modern discoveries theories about what is real and real are no longer the same. When one can send a message from Schenectady, N. Y., to Australia and back, a distance of about 20,000 miles, in a few seconds, then the theory of a material universe separated by time and space is seen as an absurdity. With former beliefs concerning reality being thus overthrown, it is small wonder that the world is in a constant state of flux and change. However, it is not a time of despair but of great
